

Health and care service priority areas

The Trafford Healthwatch 100 aims to get as many local people as possible to share their views on health and social care topics via regular surveys throughout the year.

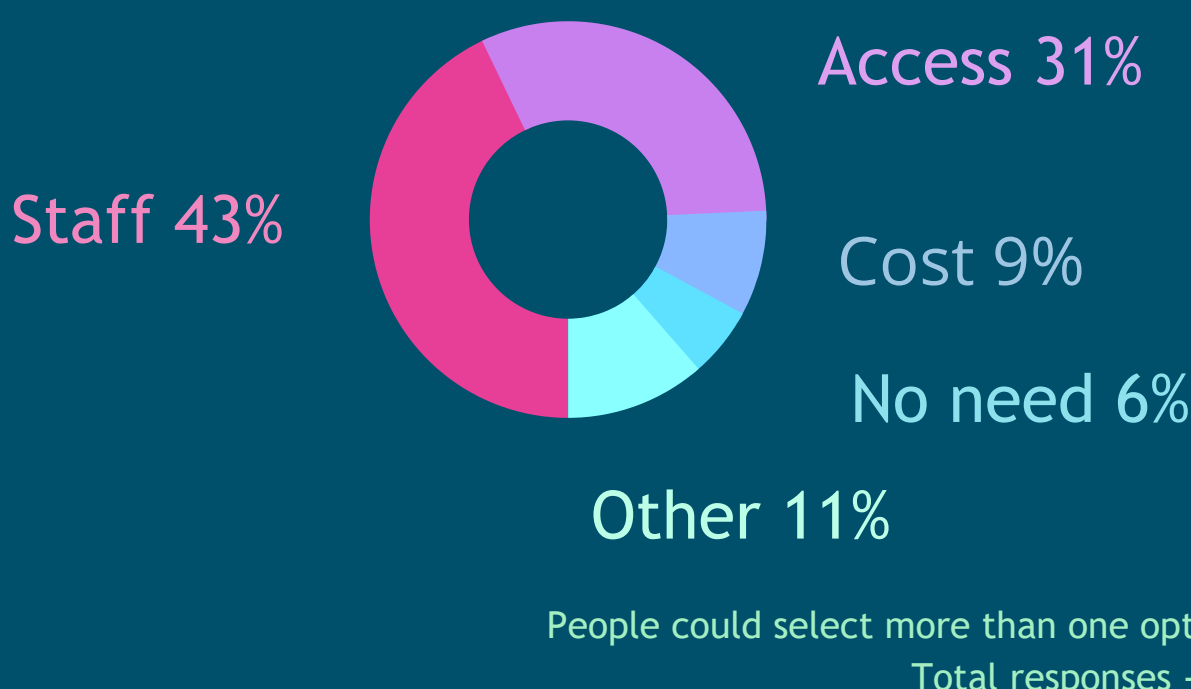

We ran a survey through June and July 2021 all about local priorities for health and care services. We asked you for your thoughts about which health and care service areas should be prioritised in the coming year, and which areas you would like to receive more attention.

The full report is available on our website.

Which services should be prioritised?

Which areas are a priority?

Key findings

When asked about priority service areas, the most popular request was for all service areas to receive attention.

In addition to the top response, there were three key areas highlighted as needing prioritising: GPs, community mental health services, and hospital outpatient services.

People told us there was a need for more clinical staff and more locally accessible services.

The comments we received showed a desire for health and care services to quickly return to pre-pandemic levels of operation.

People also supported improvements to the services offered based on convenience for patients, good quality care, well-funded services, and access for all.

What you told us

Here are some selected quotes from the main report:

"People would be able to arrive and be seen at agreed times as has happened during covid and is the first sign of a well organised system and builds immediate trust."

"Clearing backlog of operations that have had [a] severe impact on the mental health of patients who have been waiting for over 18 months."

"Putting services in areas where needed or easily accessible via public transport or have parking available nearby."

"We live in a wealthy nation and healthcare should be accessible and appropriate for all."
